Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 16, 2008

Contribution to the historic garden or park
Aesthetic significance

An uncommon planting style in Victoria, this fine row of Bunya Bunya Pines (Araucaria bidwillii) once formed the southern end of the Botanic Gardens. There is now a total of 11 trees. These trees make a major contribution to the landscape although the specimens at the eastern end have butt wounds and one is double forked.
